INTRODUCTION

The most important recent developments for the company are the acquisition of the Rug Rat Resins product range, together with the establishment of a Home Page on the Internet.

The reason for acquiring Rug Rat Resins was to give the company a means of modelling light aircraft and helicopters to a higher standard than is practicable using the existing vacuum forming techniques. The existing Rug Rat range will remain in production, while the Cessna Bobcat (which was a planned Historic Wings release) will now be a resin kit. The first helicopter in the range will be a Hiller 12E.

Our Web page has been created, and is maintained for us by Visualize Solutions Ltd., who will operate it for us for the time being. This is a major step forward in communicating with our customers, as it will contain our current catalogue, together with news of shows, new products, product improvements and anything else which we think may help or interest the modeller. You can e-mail us at aiml@geocities.com, and will find us at <http://www.geocities.com/CapeCanaveral/Hangar/3204>.

The Transport Wings range contains some of the largest 1:72 vacform kits available, and we do not know of any other manufacturer who supplies pre-cut vacformed kits. Our injection moulded intakes and jet pipes, cast metal landing gear, etched brass parts (in some kits) and high quality decals all help our kits to retain their popularity. Similarly the Historic Wings range, which is based on the old Contrail and Formaplane moulds, continues to be popular, while the improvements which we have made are very well received. The improved versions of these kits all have crude surface detail removed wherever possible, cast metal and/or cast resin detail parts will be added, together with etched brass components (in some kits) and high quality decals.

All our vacformed kits are packed in very strong polythene bags for two reasons - firstly to keep the weight of the kits to a minimum (and thus reduce postage costs), and secondly to allow modellers to examine a kit without opening the packaging (and possibly lose parts). It is not practical to supply the more fragile resin kits in polythene bags at present - strong cardboard boxes will continue to be used to pack the Rug Rat Resin kits.

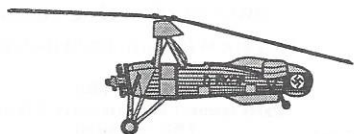

We receive help and suggestions from around the world - we always acknowledge help in producing a kit within the instructions for that kit. I must also (as always!) record my thanks to my wife Marion for her patience, enthusiasm and support, and to Steve, our Production Manager.

TIPS AND HINTS

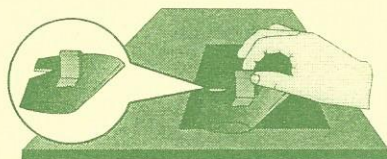

When we originally introduced our Transport Wings series, we labelled them (and still do !) as suitable for experienced modellers. We are now getting an increased number of inquiries from people who have not built a vacform kit before. The notes below are intended to help in two ways; to assist in deciding if vacform kits are for you before buying, and to give some suggestions during building them.

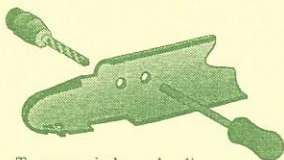

Score around mouldings with a sharp knife.

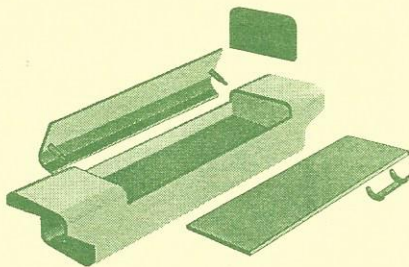

Snap off waste edges

Rub down parts to correct size or thickness on wet-or-dry paper on a flat board. Make handle to hold parts from card and adhesive tape.

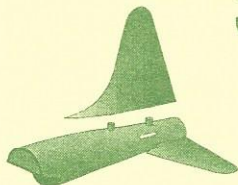

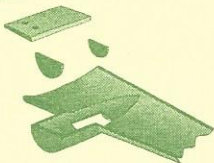

To open windows, landing gear bays, etc. drill initial hole then file or cut to shape.

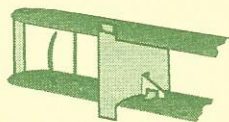

Example of detailing a bomb bay.

Examples of making landing gear bays.

Two alternative methods of attaching flying surfaces to the fuselage.

Use a card jig to aid assembly of biplane wings. Drill small holes for ends of struts, and fit them into position.

When assembling wings to fuselage, mount fuselage on a flat board, then put blocks under wing tips to give correct dihedral.
